Keep in mind that most physics students don't touch Relativity until their last year of undergrad, so if like me you did not do a physics degree, it's ok to not understand or follow everything, that's what science is about; pursuing the unknown and coming away with more questions than you entered. In addition to financial pressures on the film and tourism industries, by the early 80s South Africa was facing criticism from Western and African states and press - an atmosphere that worsened after Soweto. While films continued to proclaim the success of the nation, they also increasingly asserted its military might and efficiency, and numerous allusions are made to world opinion and diplomacy.
